The cancelation of the rest of the school year has most of the Skyline seniors reminiscing on past time and experiences, while also grieving on moments they are missing. Prom, graduation, and last goodbyes to name a few. The Forum interviewed the current 2020 senior class and asked them if they would have done anything differently if they knew the school year would come to an end quicker than anticipated.

Many seniors mentioned, they would have taken advantage of more opportunities to have fun, especially on school nights. Emma Jacobs wished she went “out on school nights to spend more the maximum amount of time with friends.” Since the year was cut short, Katelyn Jancola said, “I would have told myself to stop stressing out so much and enjoy my time with my friends.” Brooklyn Abbott would have “said yes to every opportunity to do something fun and memorable.” “Enjoy the little things,” Demetre Teodosiadis stated, he would, “balance school and a social life better so I would’ve had more time to hang out with friends.” Going from seeing the same people every day to essentially not seeing them at all, and not getting enough time to say proper goodbyes is hard. Nick Horcher and Angela Correya, along with many other seniors would have said a special goodbye to their friends, and let the teachers know how much they appreciated them. Andreas Busse would have, “said all of my goodbyes and given all of my teachers cards in person.”

Katy Harrison, “definitely would have gone to class more... and gotten my work done on time.” She was also really looking forward to walking at graduation. Many seniors such as Julia

Jacobson and missed out on their last opportunity to play their Spring sport. Jacobson stated, “I was looking forward to track invitationals and my senior season.” But she was glad she could enjoy her favorite part of high school this year, DECA. Atesha Banki said, “I was looking forward to state with my dance team.” While staying at home is a great excuse to wear your pjs every day, Banki mentioned that she, “would’ve dressed better for school.”

Some seniors may have no regrets about this school year, such as Schuyler Alton, “No regrets baby,”. And others wished they would have taken more pictures and videos to look back on.

This may not have been the typical senior year the Skyline students envisioned, but they definitely will remember it for years to come.
